

ANTI-CHOICE PROJECT

making abortion impossible to ignore or trivialize

Dear Friend of the Anti-Choice Project,

We are well underway now for our fourth year unmasking the “Choice” of abortion, which the death-dealers have strategically kept hidden for forty years. Sadly, it is still hidden from view in most American towns, but not those where a chapter of the Anti-Choice Project has been established.

The beauty of our campaign is that we provide the means for as few as two or three pro-lifers to radically reshape the collective mindset on abortion in their own hometown. Anti-Choice Project chapters are incredibly efficient in that all our staff members are convicted pro-life volunteers and the start-up cost for signs and security cameras is less than $2,000. Two-thousand dollars and two dedicated volunteers can bring a Planned Parenthood killing center to its knees.

ABORTION-ON-DEMAND IS LOSING GROUND

ACP Missoula protesting in the cold of winter

At the end of 2011 and after three years of ACP protests in Silverdale, Washington, the Planned Parenthood office in that town closed. A Planned Parenthood spokeswoman cited only a shortage of funding. But it is also true that the abortion giant grew far less popular in public opinion thanks to ACP's twice-weekly displays of their handiwork outside the two local Planned Parenthood facilities.

Kristen Walker of the pro-life organization Live Action recently blogged about her attendance at a Planned Parenthood presentation in Dallas titled “Trust Texas Women” (In The Lion's Den: Undercover At A Pro-Abortion Meeting, Live Action News). At the event, Kelly Hart, Director of Public Affairs for Planned Parenthood of North Texas, lamented recent cuts in state funding for abortion and the closing of five “health centers.” Hart was followed by Nancy Northup, President of the Center for Reproductive Rights, who warned that an “avalanche of anti-choice laws” had fallen on the country in 2011 – fifty in the state of Texas alone. After summarizing the content of the speeches and the Q&A session, Walker ends her piece by saying:

“It is just as bad as we fear it is, but it's far worse for them. The pro-life movement is making headway, and they know it. Whatever it is you're doing, keep doing it, and do more of it.”— Kristen Walker, Live Action blogger, 2012

Rest assured that the Anti-Choice Project, for one, is committed to doing just that.

MAN LASHES OUT ON OUR SIGNS AND CAMERA

One of the surest ways we know we are being effective is when pro-aborts lash out against us. This happened most recently during a protest on May 2nd in front of Olympic College in Bremerton, Washington. Twenty-one-year-old Kenrick Bradley approached ACP Co-founder, Andrew St.Hilaire, and cursed at him for displaying pictures of abortion in public. He then Kenrick Bradley was arrested and charged with assault and malicious mischief after taking and throwing our signs and attempting to destroy one of our security cameras. Watch the video posted on our website at antichoiceproject.com.

grabbed Andrew’s two signs, threw them over a nearby fence, and fled. When Andrew pursued him to capture the license plate of his vehicle on film, Bradley returned to take the camera from him and, presumably, destroy the evidence. What our assailant did not realize, however, was that everything he did was also captured on a second camera from across the street. Nevertheless, his attempt to confiscate Andrew’s camera failed, and, within hours of providing the evidence to police, Bradley was arrested and charged with assault and malicious mischief. (Watch a video of the incident on our website.)

Kenrick Bradley is a case-study on why all ACP chapters are supplied with high definition cameras and why every protest is video recorded for the duration of the protest. The safety and security of our volunteers is paramount, and our policy on security cameras is one method of ensuring that.

standing. The March of Dimes organization, whose slogan is, “Working together for stronger, healthier babies” has provided grant money to Planned Parenthood, and supports federally-funded embryo-destructive stem cell research (Seven Reasons to Boycott the March of Dimes, Life Issues Institute). So we were not the least surprised when the overwhelming majority of comments and looks we received from March of Dimes supporters was disgust – not at abortion – but at those who would dare to expose it. Their concern for babies is limited to those who are born, and the warm-fuzzy they had been getting throughout their morning charity walk was quickly dampened when confronted with the stomach-turning reality of America’s participation in baby-killing.

Thanks to your support, we are able to continue working and expanding this project, which Father Frank Pavone of Priests for Life describes as the most important: “There is no activity in the pro-life movement more important and effective than to stand on the streets of America and expose the graphic reality of abortion.”
