Dear Friend of the Anti-Choice Project,

ACP CRASHES PP FUNDRAISING EVENT

The WNBA Seattle Storm team recently announced they would be holding a fundraising rally for the abortion giant Planned Parenthood in downtown Seattle, just outside of KeyArena. In addition to the rally, the ownership-led initiative pledged to give $5 of every ticket sold at the July 18th game against the Chicago Sky to Planned Parenthood. If the Seattle Storm wants to directly fund abortions ACP will be there to crash their games with the pictures of the butchered victims their efforts produce.

The Anti-Choice Project did just that on July 18th, while perhaps two-hundred pro-aborts gathered around the Planned Parenthood stage and news cameras rolled. Some attendees decided to engage us in civil debate, while others attempted in vain to cover up the truth about abortion by forming a human wall of bodies.

ACP stood at the edges of a Seattle Storm rally for Planned Parenthood on July 18th to make certain the crowd understood what Planned Parenthood's primary business is: abortion.

ACP director Tom Herring was interviewed by Q13 Fox, the Seattle Times, and others. The news outlets were surprisingly fair in their coverage. As reported in the Times, "Tom Herring of Port Orchard, a founder and director of the Anti-Choice Project, said he attended the event in order to 'expose the injustice of abortion with the pictures of abortion victims [and] to educate people that this is what abortion does to a baby.'"

ACP crashed the Seattle Storm rally for Planned Parenthood on July 18th at the KeyArena. While some PP supporters engaged in debate, others attempted to cover up the pictures of abortion depicted on our signs.

ACP BILLBOARD DISPLAY CONTINUES

Our readers may recall that in last quarter's newsletter we called attention to the new billboard space we had just purchased in Lincoln, Nebraska. The billboard is located directly across the street from a Planned Parenthood abortion clinic. The 48-foot billboard which has the caption, "Real men don't pressure women to abort" was originally purchased for 4 weeks, but local pro-lifers were so moved and encouraged by it that they fundraised on their own to keep it up for much longer. We received this email from Mike Davis: "The Lincoln Right to Life Board paid to keep the billboard up from June 19 to July 16. We are working getting donations to be able pay for another 4 weeks."

ACP committed to ensuring the additional 4 weeks, which means this billboard will have been up from May through August! We are grateful for this opportunity to reach parents in crisis pregnancy situations. Surely this message has turned several couples away from Planned Parenthood's doors, and encouraged fathers to step up and be real men in the face of challenges. It is a message that reminds fathers that their duty as men is to protect their children – not do harm to them – as well as to protect the mother of their children from the pain and regret of abortion.

"Unwilling viewers are often our most important audience."

CULTURE WAR CONTINUES

As we have pointed out in these letters, our movement has made great strides in recent years, exposing the horrific selling of baby parts, electing pro-life representatives and governors, passing pro-life legislation, and shutting down abortion clinics across the country. For example, the Susan B. Anthony List recently revealed that Planned Parenthood is closing 10 facilities in Wyoming, Colorado, Iowa and New Mexico. And Iowa governor Terry Branstad has signed a bill that would prevent state Medicaid money from being allocated to abortion providers. Susana de Baca, president and chief executive officer of Planned Parenthood of the Heartland stated the facilities are closing because Planned Parenthood will be losing approximately $2 million in taxpayer funding, thanks to the bill signed into law by Branstad.

Baby Charlie Gard with parents. UK "death panels" denied little Charlie additional treatment and obstructed his parents' attempts to seek treatment in the US that could very well have saved his life.

These are tremendous victories to be celebrated, but our elation over them should be tempered by the recognition that this war is much greater, and not every battle is being won by our side. News from across the pond that Charlie Gard was killed by an oppressive government which forcibly denied him the right to live or seek treatment, or the defeat suffered in the Republican-controlled Senate to end funding for Planned Parenthood on July 27th should serve as sobering reminders to us that ending this assault on innocent human life is far from guaranteed. The battle rages on; let us recommit ourselves to it today, and forever!

Sincerely Yours,

Tom Herring
